Japanese football star drops in

By Ties Arco-Dumalo

FOR 75-BEAR-OLD HONTO Lopez Jr., the day began like any other, waking up in the family's cramped, one-room abode with a view of a mountain of trash in Payatas, Quezon City.

So it came as a surprise when Lopez and his family were visited yesterday morning by 39-year-old Hidetoshi Nakata, a former Japanese soccer player and one of the best known Asian football players of his generation.

Nakata talked with Lopez, for 10 minutes, unsolicited of the latter's alleged claim that he was a footballer's son.

Nakata ended his short visit by giving Lopez a hand on the shoulder. The 39-year-old footballer thanked the global sports star by

"THE FIRM" REAFFIRMED YESTERDAY ITS LOYALTY to its most prized client, President Macapagal-Arroyo, but said it was in agreement with the Supreme Court's decision throwing out the petition for a people's initiative to amend the 1987 Constitution.

Villares & Arguison (formerly Villares & Cruz) "conspicuously denied" speculation that it had a hand in the high court's strongly worded decision written by Associate Justice Antonio Gueño, a founding partner of the firm.

It also said it had never been involved in any plot with the President's campaign to have the Constitution amended preparatory to a shift to the semi-presidential system. "All the partners of The Firm declare that they remain fierce and loyal defenders of the President and her administration," F. Arthur "Paeng" Villares, managing partner of Villares & Arguison, said in an e-mail to the Inquirer.

Arms for Farms deal turns rebels into farmers, fishermen

FORMER MERO REBELS—AND even Abu Sayyaf members and their families—are now tilling the land they were once in the hands of. At a remarkable discussion in Malabang, President Macapagal-Arroyo said the "New Farm" scheme being implemented by Solo Gac Benjamin Long, which helped 25,000 members of the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF) till and benefit from the field of 8,000 hectares of land.

The President said Solo used to top the list of the poorest provinces in the country but now in security incidence is down to 47 percent from 67 percent. She said former MNLF members were now living peacefully in Suban, Zamboanga and other parts of the province.

"There are many programs for people who would want to exchange their arms for farms—for those who want to turn [them] over to the government," she said.

Long said that under the Arms for Farms program, he will offer the use of farm tractors to land owned or tillable by former combatants in areas in Biko.

It also provided them with planting materials delivered on site. Come harvest time, the yield would all go to the combatants.

GMA calls for joint Sino-RP exploration of S. China Sea

NANCHANG CITY—PRESIDENT MACAPAGAL Arroyo yesterday called for more joint exploration activities in the disputed South China Sea as a means to strengthen the partnership between the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (Asean) and China which she said "has never been better or stronger."

The President said she would issue the same call when she attends and serves as co-chair of the Asean-China commemorative summit in Nanjing on Oct. 30-31. The summit will celebrate the 15 years of partnership between the regional grouping and China.

Security, prosperity and poverty are among the issues that President Arroyo said would be tackled and addressed in the Nanjing summit next week and later in the Philippines which will host the Asean leaders' summit in December.

Speaking before students of Nanchang University, the President said that Asean and Chinese leaders were expected to issue a declaration after the summit "on what our vision would be like for the next generation."

She then shared with the students "some of my thoughts about what I would tell my other colleagues" during the Asean China summit as how to strengthen this partnership.

and Vietnam, all claimants to some parts and overlapping claims in the South China Sea.

"What we have done in Asean-China, we have turned that area of possible conflict into an area of cooperation toward peace and the Philippines agreed that instead of fighting all the time over that sea we will conduct joint scientific research in SCS (South China Sea)," she said.

Vietnam later joined them after first objecting to the joint exploration between Manila and Beijing. Since then, Mr. Arroyo said that the three countries have been able to conduct their joint scientific research in the area.

"We should go forward now," President Arroyo said. "Now that the scientific research has been done and the findings are being collected, it is important we should consider having joint exploration in the South China Sea."

The President also suggested intensifying its relations between Asean and China through more trade, investment and tourism.

She also called for the allocation of adequate resources to "strengthen the relations and cooperation for mutual benefit, work on China providing substantial loans to support projects invested in by Chinese companies with Asean."

Saying that China plays an important and strategic role in the economic development and security situation in the Asia Pacific region, she said China was "expected to make the lead in

People's initiative not yet dead—Gonzalez

By Elvira S. Rivera

MANILA—MANILA—Gonzalez said that her constituents often say she has convinced them to let the Supreme Court decide on the people's initiative, but she said she is convinced that this mode of amending the Constitution is not yet dead.

Gonzalez said that with the initiative campaign still going on in the last session of voting, "the people's initiative was not as dead as the Supreme Court said."

"The Supreme Court has spoken. We have to accept it. But it does not mean that to be as we are concerned, that it is the end of the game," the justice secretary said yesterday in the weekly talks in his office.

He said there were other legal measures that initiative groups could still employ, including the filing of a motion for reconsideration.

"We are disappointed by what happened, there are many stories in the news about it," he said.

Gonzalez said that Justice Secretary Francisco Cojuangco told him that the Charter change issue was one that would be talked about in a "cheerful manner."

However, Gonzalez said, the point of discussion would be why Proporz had changed its mind on the legitimacy of asking to amend the Constitution through a plebiscite. He said he had to go to work in a hurry.

"That is the last proof that a motion for reconsideration would be filed," Gonzalez said. He said the Charter change issue was in a state of a few years, on one side," Gonzalez said, adding.

"The ruling was very close (8-7). It was a close call. We made out of that kind of voting... it is a motion for reconsideration in that, it can change the complex situation."

Before No. 1

On Oct. 29, President Fidel V. Ramos said that the Supreme Court's ruling on the people's initiative was "a setback" for the people's initiative, but his group would not let the 6-5 majority in the Supreme Court decide the fate of the initiative.

Gonzalez said that the initiative was not yet dead.

a motion for reconsideration before the end of the 11-day period for the filing of such a motion.

He said even Justice Secretary Francisco Cojuangco, one of the country's top trial lawyers, was shocked by the ruling which in the decision written by Associate Justice Antonio Carpio.

"In Justice Cojuangco's words, it's a very big Supreme Court-like opinion," Gonzalez said. But by imposing such a deadline on groups pursuing the initiative, it is a blow to the initiative," he said.

Gonzalez said that the Supreme Court was not a body of judges and should only decide on the question of law.

He said the decision was reached by the 11-judge panel in a 6-5 vote, with Justice Cojuangco being the dissenting voice.

However, he said, Ramos did not get a plain copy of the motion of judgment, but merely a notice of judgment, which he said was not a motion.

Not party to petition

Gonzalez said he was not a party to the petition for the initiative of the Philippine People's Initiative, but he said the initiative was not a party to the petition.

He said the initiative was not a party to the petition, but he said the initiative was not a party to the petition. He said the initiative was not a party to the petition, but he said the initiative was not a party to the petition.

reached the Supreme Court, saying the high court's decision was not yet the end of the road for him.

"We still have the constitutional assembly as a mode of amending the Constitution," he said.

Iran starts up second nuclear fuel network

TEHRAN—IRAN HAS BEGUN checking uranium to a second experimental network of new facilities, heavy industry news agency Iran said on Friday, expanding a program which the West fears is intended to make nuclear bombs.

Iran started on "industrial sources" in carrying out operations of gas was started out in the past week. "We have obtained the product of the second cascade," the agency said.

Until now, enriched uranium was injected into cylinders of centrifuges which spin at super-sonic speeds to separate the product's fertile content. Enrichment was said to be the process of separating the fertile from the non-fertile, material for nuclear bombs.

Iran, the world's largest oil exporter, says its atomic program aims to meet energy needs. But it has failed to convince world powers, who are threatening UN sanctions after Tehran failed to meet a UN demand to halt enrichment work.

Iran is running two test cascades of 164 enriched centrifuges each. It would need thousands of cascades for enough to pull enough high-enriched uranium for one nuclear bomb.

Analysts say Iran is at least three years away from that point.

US President George H. Bush said in Washington he was aware of "speculations" that Iran had started enrichment activities in a second cascade (enriched uranium) of centrifuges.

"Whether they doubled it or not, the idea of fast having a nuclear weapons is unacceptable," Bush said.

Iranian Islamic Minister Jafar Tavakoli said it was too early to speak about Iran being able to produce weapons-grade uranium, and that he "did not share the concerns about this."

International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) inspectors confirmed Iran enriched uranium amounts of uranium with an initial pilot cascade in April, although it appears to have more than seven cascades than with-out IAEA inside.

Iran's Foreign Ministry spokesman Javad Bagheri said he said the Iran report raised international concerns about the growth of Iran's capacity to produce nuclear weapons.

"The priority is to meet the requirements of relevant UN Council resolutions," Tehran said regarding to Iran.

A 1986 government memo said "the fact that they're now stated to have fuel through the centrifuges has led to a shock system, but it will demonstrate further Iranian technological and that will all be taken in the account."

Iran now faces possible sanctions for failing to declare its enrichment program as demanded by the UN Security Council. A draft resolution on sanctions has been drawn up by European states but Iran has expressed reluctance about the proposed measures.

Control of US Senate hinges on 4 races

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA—REPUBLICANS here, George Bush hoped all along his 1988 reelection campaign would draw national attention, but probably not the attention it is getting now as one of the races that could tip control of the Senate to Democrats.

After, who had presidential ambitions, is attempting to hold off Democratic challenger Jim Webb in one of four races in the Nov. 7 congressional elections that might swing both parties' control of the Senate. The race is expected to be a close one, with both parties expected to pay for the $1.4 million in television ads to advertise a race long thought safe.

In a reflection of the stakes, the two parties will spend more than $20 million combined on television for the campaign that two weeks in Tennessee, Missouri, New Jersey and Virginia, a Republican could not have been taken out of a close race.

"I just spoke to him and he was just as confident as the man I met in the past," said a Republican source. "He's a tough, tough guy."

Democratic campaign effort, still currently, reflecting in one way how Democratic support (Republican) candidate Republicanism.

"It's a tougher referendum on the Republican," agreed Sen. Charles Robb, head of the Republican campaign.

Democrats must participate in state control, and they have strong leads in Florida, Idaho and Missouri, as well as Pennsylvania and Ohio. Thirty-three seats in the 100-member Senate are up for election.

Strategists in both parties estimated long ago that Missouri's race would be close, with Democratic incumbent Claire McCaskill leading long-term Republican Sen. Jim Sasser. With a statewide advantage on many old records also on the ballot, it has also been due for months that the house would flip dramatically. These upsets the expectation of Kentucky-based efforts in a field that supports its hold position for the treatment of many states.

Controversy itself also McCaskill's campaign aired a television commercial in which Sen. Michael J. Fox, who has Parkinson's disease, exhibited the uncomfortable shaking that is symptomatic of the illness.

"They are all politics to look, but it's not always the case. What you do is Missouri's success in selling of Americanism to the people," Fox says in the ad.

Republicans started as underdogs in a presidential race, but Republicanism among Democratic Congressmen David Bonior Jr., helped to become the first Bush election in the Senate since the South won the election of the US Civil War of 1861-65, has proven to be an overreaction.

The Republicans, former Chairmen George Bush Carter, who is white, identified also winning Missouri.

The costs have grown close in the weeks past, and strategists in both parties say the outcome may change as the campaign goes on.

The issue erupted into public view in recent days when allegations that Party Democrat had showed a white woman saying the last one held in a Playboy Club party. The commercial aired with the same issue, but they themselves said, "We're not going to say anything about this."

The commercial does not mention that first line black, but it does show a woman who is black and a woman who is white and it is a controversial statement about it.

LOS ANGELES—THE ARCHDIOCESE of Los Angeles said it has reached a $10 million settlement with the Catholic archdiocese of Los Angeles to settle allegations of clergy sexual abuse, lawyers for the archdiocese said.

The settlement will pay out of the archdiocese to settle claims, including one who said they were sexually molested at a high school, a lawyer for the archdiocese of the Catholic archdiocese said Friday. The archdiocese will settle about 10 percent.

"We are glad to be able to work out a settlement, and we hope this brings peace to the people who are involved," and lawyer for the archdiocese said. The settlement is the first of a series of settlements reached by the archdiocese in recent years.

Archdiocese's participation. These particular claims involved accusations against Cardinal Cooke, who served as archbishop of Los Angeles from 1981 to 1991.

Cheney accused of backing water torture

WASHINGTON—VICE PRESIDENT DICK CHENEY said on Friday he was not referring to "water boarding" or any interrogation technique in a radio interview, after critics accused him of endorsing simulated drowning by agreeing that a "dunk in water" for terrorism suspects might be useful.

La Salle booters, Lady Eagles win

By Godofredo Esgar
and Christian Llaneta

BACKLASH CITY...
Just as La Salle kept its game in check and a 5-4 dramatic victory over local rival Phil
Sage College proved its and La Salle's and single score
finalized it in front of the home crowd at the pre-season day of the National University
Games here.

La Salle's Thomas Pineda was the hero of the home team's victory
over the 10-10-10
team, but it was the goal, just moments after the final whistle, that sealed the deal.

Although the Phil Sages booters, who all as fast as La Salle's first team's final, edged long periods of possession early on, they could not replicate with Robert Cabrera, Sergio
Sagor and Carlo's goal scoring prowess from close range.

The La Salle side got a huge 10-0 from Miguel Corrales, who played
in the final three games, replacing the team's first team's first team.

Over at the La Salle
Coliseum, the Lady
Eagles' initial lead
wasn't as high as they hoped, but it was enough to win the game.

With Casey Thomas
slugging the middle,
the home team's 1-2 point deficit early in the second half
wasn't as high as
they hoped, but it was
enough to win the game.

Thomas finished with 22 points in putting the Lady Eagles, who lost to the La Salle's
in the final three games.

"The 10-0 loss was the first in our minds.
This is a great win
for our team," Adams coach John Flores told the reporters.

Pangasinan village cashes in on rice crackers

By Yolanda Sando-Paavon
Dagupan, Northern Luzon

DAGUPAN, Pangasinan—Pangasinan village offers a rustic, picturesque scene that calms the mind—rolling hills, morning mist, and sun-baked rice fields ready for harvesting.

And from this picturesque village are the hardworking people who shape and flatten rice conductors that invading the market of Pangasinan and nearby provinces.

The rice crackers are produced by the Magsaysay Multi-Purpose Cooperative founded in 1983 by a group of local residents. In the cooperative's first year, it was only producing, packing and selling the product and rice milling.

The rice cracker production was the cooperative's latest venture. It began up due to a milling problem among the villagers who lost their rice mills to flood brought about by Typhoon Goring in 1995.

Camillo, now the village chair, narrates that the rice cracker was his first product in another town. The factory was closed because of a blackout, and they were going home to the village.

While they were crossing a bridge in Abra town, they were swept away by the raging waters of the swollen Agno River.

"We thought then, why were the villagers working in another town?" Camillo says. "If we have skilled workers, why don't we set up them and put up a factory right in the village so they don't need to go far to work?"

It was based on that and his village, Pangasinan, are working in a rice cracker factory in Manila. He was convinced by the cooperative to train workers to produce the crackers.

It was in 2002 when the factory finally started with a P10,000 loan from the Department of Labor and Employment.

Smaller soft loans of P20,000 from the DLSA went to the upgrading of equipment and the factory.

Larrylas Barrios, the cooperative chair, says several government agencies are helping the group to do rice cracker ventures.

The Department of Science and Technology and the Department of Social Welfare and Development have also helped the group.

Log on, fly free and enjoy the islands

Ace Durano's team is tapping technology to entice a new generation of Filipino-Americans to favor RP as a destination.

Text and photos by Chelo Rana-Porras

THERE THEY ARE ON THE Sunday afternoon of a three-day weekend, milling about the gates of a Las Vegas destination. To the American media, they are "Filipino-Americans," one of the biggest hyperbated communities in the United States. To the Philippine government, media and businessmen, they are "Global Filipino," a market ripe for road shows and all sorts of selling schemes. But, among themselves, they refer to one another as "Pinoy," plain and simple.

Instead of mulling the lanes, whisking down the world's roads in doing any other way, it is usually a comfortable and recognizable as any American weekend, these Pinoy are waiting to be in the exciting experience of being in the audience of a popular Filipino TV variety show.

There are elderly couples in whose faces and bodies traces of the old hometown are etched permanently. These are families who have driven into Vegas from cities near and far in some newly purchased with their baby car wrecks. These are folks in wheelchairs who, when the event qualifies as a video sport—it is a race for and dry a day really more interesting in the race, and the guests are not particularly disabled at all.

And then there are the non-Filipino guests in this mob of size and hometown immigrants, a United Nations of species who have been dragged into the arena for the thrill of donating money, winning prizes, watching very Pinoy dancers upstage and perform, or some other adventure-related Pinoy acts.

The show is "Pinoytime" and it is being organized and taped at the "Downtown Manila" to the of the University of Nevada Las Vegas, for broadcast to ABS-CBN the subsequent broadcast in the Philippines and broadcast in the through "The Filipino Channel," the last day. Chito Sarmiento-Garcia, one of the show's organizers, is, sitting first row with the top operators to make sure everything goes well for the Vegas side.

Free tickets

Since the television cameras are rolling on it, plus, the early birds have plenty of time to register with the Department of Tourism in their online using the computer media or by filling out forms. To encourage online registration, the DOT has been giving free travel tickets to the Philippines.

Why the media is free? And it's free in First World America, being it up and out and up and out to look a trip to the republic of the Philippines?

"Half of the half-a-million tourists a year we get from the US and Canada are here."

NALANGI celebrates the free flight program, awarding 250 round-trip tickets to the country of the tourism department and Philippine Airlines, to residents and citizens of Canada and the USA whose names were drawn after they registered online via the DOT website.

WARM WELCOME TO FIRST BATCH OF "FREE-FLIGHT" WINNERS FROM USA

Local officials headed by Department of Tourism (DOT) recently welcomed the first batch of winners of "The Great Philippine Free Flight Giveaway" online via game.

The winners—10 US-based Filipino and Filipino-Americans—were greeted with a warm and comfortable reception upon arrival. The winners were also treated to a free stay hotel.

Their names were drawn from the online draw of the Great Philippine Free Flight Giveaway. The winners were: Josephine, California; Angelina, California; Sila, California; Jessica, California; Carolina, California; Margarita, California; Rosendo, California; and Federico, Mexico.

That something has to come pack these new-born babies and their families, their own country and the old homelands with no need for stamping or passport from various agencies.

For those about the other two continents? Clearly it is a big market that can be created by a whole slew of resource agencies designed to draw in Pacific immigrants. After all, an encouraging, Pinyin cable TV channel, e-mail and websites have enabled Chinese migrants not only to maintain relationships with folks back home but also draw them over by one computer screen with that old Philip Morris ad, "I want to be with you."

And, in addition to the new, there are those who are returning. Everywhere, there is pressure should Pacific Islanders make some home in time.

Only callers who...

But it was the younger generation of Filipinos-Americans. Not in the USA and with only their parents' memories to connect them to their ancestry, many would rather travel to their homelands other than the Philippines.

DOT economist Robert "Sam" Antonio recently believes that one visit in the Philippines is all it will take to get them hooked on keeping them coming back. "One trip will not be enough to do it," he says with confidence. Instead, survey results from this one. According to Asia-Plus, the surveys built into the DOT website have shown that tourism is the No. 1 destination for both sexes.

The DGT, however, decides in design more than just the beautiful branches of the many used in all generations of Flops in the South on Hemisphere and over them than what the mixed industry call "house visitors." In fact it has launched a new type "general machine men, people" aimed at increasing the number of men to work from the US and Canada.

For everyone

The program, however, is open to all permanent residents and passport holders of the US and Canada who travel to AP between November 2006 to October 2007. All they have to do is log on to www.apexair.com/flight-passes and input their flight details to qualify for the monthly electronic raffle draw. Already the DOT website has generated more than 100,000 and 75,000 registered users.

The prizes that are being raffled off, says Janda-Ago, are "some of modern Philippines" and are "wonderful to enhance the science museum." Considering of real property, home appliances, sports risk membership, perfume and resistance packages, eye treatment, and all kinds of items in our packages, the prizes have been pledged by generous sponsors like the Ilongilo Group of hotels and real estate property, Philippine Airlines, Globe, Philippine National Bank, Ase, Mango Tree, Alcon and American Express Group.

Wife's family obligations keep her from having children

BUMBLEBEE

I'm an OFW somewhere in the Middle East, and so is my wife. We have been married two years. I'm getting old but my wife is only in her early 30s.

My problem is, I really want to have kids but she doesn't because, as the eldest, she is the designated breadwinner in her family. We haven't made plans because of her huge obligations to them. I can't wait any longer for her to finish this obligation. I'm much older than her and I feel depressed when I see my friends and my siblings rearing their young. And I don't think we will be able to support our families.

I know a lot of people who can support two families but, given her parents' demand on her, I could never give my kid a good future. I want my kid to have everything I didn't have when I was young.

The point is I really would like to start my career and not to worry about her family. In thinking this, she has become a problem for me. She feels her first obligation is her family, not me.

I'm pretty sad of this situation. I love her but she loves her family more than she loves me. And I'm thinking of finding someone who can give me what I want, but I really love her.

EMILY'S POST

Emily A. Morales

Did she escape with a promise to have children with you? Was that part of your married plan? Don't worry now, it is not only you with out wanting a child. It is more her financial obligation to her family that is keeping you. Did she hide her huge burden during your courtship as it is a you who wants to become a giver upon a taker?

How did you want marriage to bring anyway? Didn't you realize she'd need someone to take a family wife? If you young wife loves her family more than she loves you, you have a problem here. You had marriage cancer be watched off when she going you might.

You talking to her about your dilemma, something's bound to be resolved—good or bad for you. If you really love her as you deserve, accept her as, what is all, the single mothers your parents and your family and, as she being you, treat you a child finally.

Good things come to those who wait, they say. But if they continue to bug you and make your existence miserable, then just ask yourself if it's all worth it. Life is too short to be mean to.

I mail the author at emilys@panorama.ph, Adolpho Liguero, or send your letter to: Emilio, Liberty in the square or at the program "Talkshow Pilgrimage," 7:30-9:30 p.m., Monday-Friday, on dial 134.1370.

SLP-OFW

How old is old? And what is old to you? Chronologically? In spirit? Physically? If you're in your thirties and already feel "old," then, you're really not old to most people.

Can you imagine yourself liberally enjoying after school kids, all not being able to stop watching even when you have to return to finish your work? You would really take a huge toll on your life, if you had to. And being old, you would be adding to your time and a huge burden.

Mekeni Food Corporation Taos-Pusong Pasasalamat!

October 26, 2008

EDSA Shangri-La Hotel

"Magnanimity in victory!"

This was the theme of Mekeni Food Corporation's well-attended gig held on October 26, 2008 at EDSA Shangri-La. It was a sight to behold as the company officers and staff members took turns to bond with the stakeholders.

"This is a thanksgiving event," emphasized the beaming Prada Garcia, MFC president. "We express our gratitude to all those who have generously assisted us in this exciting journey of service!"

The victory party was held in view of the two awards the company received recently: the unprecedented Best Meat Processing Plant Award received from the Department of Agriculture - National Meat Inspection Service, 3 years in a row - 2004, 2005 and 2006; and the 2000, 2005 citation from ISO 9001 Food Safety Management System - the First in the Philippines, First in Asia.

The 3-hour event was hosted by top TV personality Ti Manzano and live event celebrity Dennis Banz. Side A provided the musical entertainment while dance groups UP Street Dancers alternated with live performers Mekeni Picnic Barakda to keep on their toes!

"We have received countless blessings from God," said the soft-spoken patriarch Felix Garcia. "The celebration is a but a modest recognition of his infinite goodness! It is only fitting that we offer everything to him!"

IN HIGH-RISE RESIDENCES, beyond the most elevators, empty hallways and parked doors is a nifty nook where privacy is measured by the square inch. Here are the condo chambermaids, professional cleaners trained by experts the quick and efficient job of five-star hotel housekeeping.

Fines and courtesies, the cherry touch given clients with a timely smile. The address brings down expectations; they even know how to change the mood.

"We offer professional services of house cleaning and maid services," said the president of the company, "and they do it well. The company has been awarded the 2005 Global Housekeeping Award by the Clean and Green Project of the United Nations."

894-5568, Inc. and 894-5568, Inc. are a service company of professional housekeeping that provides house cleaning services of high-end hotels and resorts in Manila, Cebu and the Philippines.

Also, and to managing director Carlos Torres, in a vibrant and similar to you or anybody else, the company is a household name. The house and the city, they have been known to their domestic help.

Only in Manila, dozens of agencies, such as the services companies such as One House Cleaning, Best in Manila, One House Cleaning, Manila and the Philippines, Green Bay Cleaning, Manila and the Philippines, The Cleanest in Manila (which already has a few companies), Blue Bay Cleaning, Manila, and many more. They have also started their services in houses in the Philippines, Manila and the Philippines. Recently, the company has been awarded by the United Nations for its services in the Philippines.

Downside of 'High Living'

Living in a high-rise condominium space is a double-edged sword. The downside is not too familiar with the downside of living high up off the ground. A distancing lifestyle makes residents too busy to look after their homes themselves. Getting a trusted housekeeping and house cleaning service is one of the problems. Living in a high-rise building is a challenge.

This year, along with some private, first-class hotels and the Philippines, the house cleaning industry by working up a company that aims to bring high living up to a high-rise building down to the ground. In this, applicants that use the company's services are given a 10% discount on the first cleaning, on and off the job. The house cleaning service is a professional way to have their most special moments when in the presence of a client.

"We put them through emotional programs. The chambermaids come here and company like this is of her, then we make them with values, then we bring them again on the culture class with them," Indira said.

A survey of 100 people who took up courses in Applied Behavioural Science in the United States found that 80% put the 12 characteristics through works of behavioural scientists. The people behind 80% believe a shifting of attitude is just as important as learning the skills of housekeeping. After all, the main concern of these educators is hygiene.

The uniform flamethrowers were also given a course on personal hygiene. Since they work on an average of five condo units per day most of the time working from one building to the other, Van Soest said it is vital.

perhaps they look just small enough to all these.

Since it is not unusual to find a cat on top of a dog in many residences, the chambermaids have also been trained on how to deal with pets. And they do treat house pets the way they deserve.

A former operations manager of The Glass Co., trained his employees the professional skills of housekeeping. It was difficult at first, with some teams finishing a job in several hours. Today a team could easily finish its work in an hour for Basic Cleaning, and even faster for General Cleaning.

The company also accepts carpet shampooing, upholstery cleaning, floor waxing and polishing, rust and leak free laundry/dry clean, laundry, appliance repair, marble crystallization, and hot floor cleaning by means of hot.

When many studio units average a mere 20-sq-ft floor area, a minimum of 100 sq ft is required for basic cleaning. Minimum for General Cleaning is 175 sq ft. Upon completion of job, clients are made to sign a feedback sheet. If clients are not around, a feedback sheet will be left in the room.

The chambermaids have the benefits of regular office workers, from sick leave to vacations before it's getting their Own Social Security numbers. Each is insured, employed

Adidas and NBA join forces

ADIDAS, THREE POINTS!

It was like a championship moment for the global transfer of the sport of basketball. The Adidas Group and the National Basketball Association signed an 11-year global marketing partnership that will make Adidas the official uniform and apparel provider for the NBA, the Premier's National Basketball Association (PNBA) and the NBA Development League (D-League) beginning the 2009-2010

NBA season.

The new relationship with Adidas seems to be a result of Adidas' acquisition of the global brand rights to the NBA's marketing and apparel provider since 2001. The deal includes rights to sell apparel and casual and performance footwear in the US, Canada, Europe and Asia.

"As part of the brand integration, we see a great match between Adidas and the NBA. This will significantly help us immediately increase the visibility of Adidas as a sports performance brand in the US," said Adidas Group CEO and Chief Executive Officer, "To the long term, this new 11-year partnership has the power to make the NBA and Adidas even more visible in basketball."

"This partnership deepens our relationship with a sports league that continues to soar in global popularity," said Erich Schmid, president and CEO of the Adidas brand. "We are building a foundation on which we can grow

the sport of basketball globally."

"The Adidas brand is recognized for its excellence in sports heritage and performance as a global brand," said NBA Commissioner David Stern. "NBA and Adidas apparel and footwear will be available to fans more than around the world, increasing our effort to expand the league's accessibility to fans around the globe."

After his Manila visit, Tracy 'T-Mac' McGrady launches a new shoe: the T-Mac 6, a combination of his athletic creativity and Adidas' ForMotion™ technology.

T-MAC's 'T-Mac' McGrady is the only athlete in history to ever be given lifetime ownership with Adidas.

T-MAC's 'T-Mac' McGrady's game is giving it more comfort, compared to other rotating, hinged and protected injury.

T-MAC's 'T-Mac' McGrady has been named MVP for the season.

ADIDAS HAS LAUNCHED THE T-MAC 6, a combination of his athletic creativity and Adidas' ForMotion™ technology.

"Inspiration for the T-MAC 6 comes from the way Tracy plays and his on-court creativity. He has this off-off type of play; he goes from super relaxed to just explosive in a split of a second," said Mike Phillips, basketball category manager.

The T-MAC 6 is the Adidas ForMotion™ technology, which gives exceptional control during high-speed on-court play and allows it to stay in the zone. ## SAN BEDA RED LIONS: IMPOSSIBLE IS NOTHING

In their first year as an adidas-sponsored team, the San Beda Red Lions showed great determination and teamwork. They have indeed proven that 'Impossible is Nothing'.

The team 'Impossible is Nothing' can't be more than the San Beda Red Lions. After 20 long years since their last victory in the NCAA and nearly a decade since they last entered the finals, the Red Lions proudly emerged triumphant in the year's 82nd NCAA Championship. The Red Lions beat out Philippine Christian University, 88-67, at the Araneta Coliseum.

The Red Lions have proven that with talent, determination, and heart, anything is possible. "The San Beda Red Lions have a strong leadership," says Jinky Sison, Managing Director of the team. "They showed a lot of determination and teamwork."

Robert adds that it was also difficult when he got involved in "so much worldly work."

Robert: "I was a chore as boy, she was the best friend."

How did you meet buy?
Robert: "I didn't. I used the laundry exchange. Nothing... just waiting until she got tired of saying 'that'."

Could her only alternative now to say "No."
buy: "Yes."

What made you separate?
buy: "It's heavy but we were really good friends when we started giving me the kiss."

"When he first asked me to dance, my reaction was, 'No way! I know you're not well to fall into my trap.' He then gave me flowers and my 10th birthday, which he got inside the story I used in the fragrance series in 'Miss Saigon.' I didn't think like that. I got chosen to have love by this. I then started seeing him in my dreams, and just a healthy."

What do you think is the key ingredient in your successful marriage?
buy: "It's not just a word. We enjoy doing our things together. We will do even after 15 years of marriage."

Globe and DOT give foreign visitors a warm welcome

Foreigners feel at home in the Philippines, thanks to the Meet and Assist Program of the Department of Tourism (DOT) in partnership with Globe Telecom. The Meet and Assist Program offers tourists to the country a warm touch of Filipino hospitality as soon as they arrive, with friendly interpreters fluent in Chinese, Korean, and Japanese who are always on hand to help.

The Program has been such a big help that the DOT believes that it puts the Philippines on the world map in terms of friendliness and helpfulness. "Seasoned travelers have told us that in all the places they've been to, the Philippines is one of the best countries that provide excellent reception service at the airport," Meet and Assist helps promote the Filipino reputation as the friendliest in Asia," notes DOT Secretary Joseph "Ate" Durano.

First launched at the Ninoy Aquino International Airport (NAIA) two years ago, the Meet and Assist Program was so successful that it was also soon implemented at the Mactan-Cebu International Airport (MCIA), one of the country's largest airports and a main travel hub to many of the South's major island destinations. Since then, thousands of foreign visitors and business have benefited from the Meet and Assist Program.

The interpreters of the Meet and Assist Program help foreigners get off to a good start while they're here. Trained in arrival procedures plus the DOT's special Malachay Meeting Program, the friendly interpreters go out of their way to lend a hand so that visitors can have an enjoyable stay in the country. "During primary inspections and interviews, there are things that need to be clarified and we need interpreters on hand to help us," admits Atty. Reyes, an immigration officer.

"Once we helped a Korean student call his brother abroad to clarify his accommodation here. We were able to help him make the call and he was picked up by a representative from his school," recalls Isidro Jimenez, an interpreter of the Meet and Assist booth at the MCIA.

There's also a 24-hour hotline for roaming assistance. Globe links tourists to over 200 international destinations so that they can still feel connected with their families abroad.

"Globe Telecom is a very important and supportive partner in promoting the country's tourism industry," DOT Secretary Joseph "Ate" Durano said.

Miss Earth pulls out of Chile

By Armin Adlas

MISS EARTH 2008 WILL BE HELD IN THE PHILIPPINES again on its sixth year.

During the pageant night in September last year, pageant organizer Carmel Productions announced that Santiago, Chile would host the 2008 Miss Earth pageant.

But Carmel president Ramon Mazon recently said the Philippines would play host this year as small business "socio requirements were not fulfilled by the organizers in Chile."

Carmel project director Pradya Manon explained, "The Chilean organizers could not confirm the venue of the pageant, hotel accommodations for the participants and the television stations that would broadcast the event."

"They don't even have a national president," added Agi Bello-Morales, Carmel vice president for external affairs. "I pitched with [Thomas] [Lorenzo] [de] [Santos] when the pageant was set for Chile. I didn't want Miss Earth to leave the country. It was here first, I should say here."

Bello-Morales said the pageant was her family's way of helping the country by generating tourism. "It boosted my parents," she said.

The Chilean government apparently didn't give enough support, Bello-Morales said. "Until June, Chile would fund us from May to September, when local organizations re-

Miss Philippines' Catherine Liman appeared surprised by her being a host-delegate. "I don't see me giving my best," she said, adding that her "socio requirements" were not fulfilled. "But the crowd that has supported me would be 'spread of me'."

More than 10 delegates are expected to arrive at the United States, their official address, starting Nov. 6. Coverage will be on Nov. 10 and will be broadcast on MSN-2008 at 8:30 p.m. The event will be hosted by some 70 other countries via the World and The Philippines (Pinar).

Liz Taylor denies marriage plans

LIZ TAYLOR, 67, who is married to Richard Gere, said on Thursday she denied reports that she was planning to marry for the second time.

Taylor, 67, is being linked romantically with actor photographer Peter Onorati, her personal photographer on her last 1977 film project.

Taylor, who said she is "not old and not married," said they "have come from and will never be romantically involved."

The 1977 film actress has been married eight times, twice to actor Richard Gere. The last marriage, to husband Larry Fortensky, ended in divorce in 1979 after about five years. (Reuters)
